PROFILE

I have a genuine talent with words and for shaping the messy ideas in other people's heads into something clear. Because I don't bring ego into edits, I can manage the process properly, from someone's first rough explanation through every round of feedback to the final version. Founders have brought me in before they had a marketing team, a settled name or a finished product. I learn new fields fast, which is how I moved from disinformation and homeland security research into cybersecurity.

EXPERIENCE

Narrative & Communications Consultant, Independent

Jan 2025 – Present

- Work directly with early-stage cybersecurity founders on positioning, launch messaging, website copy and pitch materials.
- Usually brought in before a company has a marketing team, a settled name or a defined customer, and kept on through pivots and repositioning.

Content Manager, YL Ventures (cybersecurity venture capital)

Jul 2019 – Jan 2025

- Worked on communications for 16 portfolio companies, from pre-seed through early growth, and led the launch content for seven of them, from positioning to press materials. Six of those seven companies went on to raise follow-on funding, get acquired or land major partnerships.
- Became the first call for founders who needed to explain what their company does, often before they had a name, a product or a marketing plan.
- Ghostwrote thought leadership for founders across the portfolio and for the YL Ventures team, on investment trends and B2B cybersecurity trends. Pieces ran on LinkedIn and in outlets including TechCrunch and Dark Reading.
- Wrote press releases, statements, speeches and briefing materials for launches, partnerships and acquisitions, and worked with journalists alongside the firm's PR agency.
- Researched and wrote executive reports on B2B cybersecurity trends, based on dozens of interviews with CISOs and security leaders, and published the 2023 findings as a bylined TechCrunch column.
- Wrote technical breakdowns of security bugs and their fixes.

EARLIER CAREER

- Homeland Security Analyst & Content Coordinator, ASERO Worldwide (2018–2019). Security research, analysis and proposals for foreign state organizations and large conglomerates, including GDPR advisory documentation. Generated project leads and designed, managed and wrote the company website.
- Counter Terror Desk Intern, Abba Eban Institute (2017–2018). Identified the legal distinction EU foreign policy draws between Hezbollah's military and political wings, which drove much of the institute's policy work.
- Analyst & Content Coordinator, Firewall Israel, Reut Group (2016–2017). Researched and analyzed coordinated antisemitic and antizionist disinformation campaigns on college campuses, and wrote all of the project's reports and communications. Designed the structure of Firewall's research database.
- Legal Intern, Shurat HaDin (2015). Legal research for terrorism cases and on Hamas war crimes, and legal translation from French to English.
