PROFILE

I'm a deadly efficient editor with a talent for getting people to say what they actually mean. That has been the core of every job I've had: as a homeland security and disinformation analyst, tracing coordinated campaigns and writing policy research, then six years as the communications partner to founders who often didn't yet have a name, a website, or a clear pitch. I hold an MA in Government, Diplomacy & Conflict, magna cum laude. I learn new fields quickly, take edits without ego, and hold my ground where my knowledge demands it. In a market where anyone can generate content, I'm hired for judgment: what to say, what to cut, and which word will hold a reader's attention.

EXPERIENCE

Narrative & Communications Lead, Independent

Jan 2025 – Present

- Partner directly with early-stage founders, currently a pre-seed and a pre-Series A company, on positioning, launch messaging, website copy, pitch materials, and communications.
- Serve as the primary narrative resource before a marketing team exists, including through pivots and repositioning.
- Published a TechCrunch byline through independent research, reporting, and writing.

Content Manager, YL Ventures (venture capital)

Jul 2019 – Jan 2025

- Communications lead for 16 companies from founding through early growth. Led full launches for 7, plus content support across the rest. 6 of the 7 went on to raise follow-on funding, get acquired, or land major partnerships.
- Became the first call for founders and CEOs on anything narrative, often before a company name, product, or plan existed.
- Wrote press releases for launches, partnerships, and acquisitions, and worked with journalists alongside the firm's PR agency: FAQs, briefing materials, and interview preparation for executives.
- Handled the moments that couldn't go wrong: fast-cycle launches, pivots, and critical bug-related materials.
- Researched, wrote, and produced multi-year executive research reports, synthesizing dozens of senior-level interviews into data-backed findings.
- Ghostwrote thought leadership and executive communications, in voices close enough to each person's own that it read as theirs.

EARLIER CAREER

- Homeland Security Analyst & Content Coordinator, ASERO (2018–2019): research, proposals, and client-facing communications for foreign state organizations and large conglomerates, including GDPR advisory documentation and website content.
- Counter Terror Desk Intern, Abba Eban Institute (2018–2019): political research; policy proposal to recognize all Hezbollah councils under terror legislation.
- Analyst, Firewall Israel project, Reut Group (2016–2018): tracking, research, and analysis of coordinated antisemitic and antizionist disinformation campaigns on college campuses, plus official communications and reporting for the project.
- Legal Intern, Shurat HaDin (2015): legal research for terrorism cases and on Hamas war crimes; French translation and drafting support.
